Quote:if your team needs an extra 20 or 100 creds for an ion or vec, why not give them it? it could do them more use then you. help your team out.

It's pretty easy to see why people would be reluctant to fork over credits, even if it is a nice and helpful thing to do. You really do never know how much good the person is going to do with it- and I have donated 500+ creds to folks just to have them get blasted 5 feet outside the base because they weren't being careful. Anymore, I like to wait a round before donating to anyone, just so I can get a feel for who could make the best use of it (if someone gets MVP then asks for creds, for example, it's probably worth lending them a hand...but if someone is consistently rambo rushing and dying, you ought to save it for your own needs). In general, though, if you have extra credits that you don't need, by all means- give them to someone who'll put them to some use, especially in the late game when you could easily have enough for an extra tank or two.
