EA has many faults, not the least of which is releasing the same crappy game for every sport every year, with slightly updated graphics and new player rosters and stats, but you know what REALLY gets my blood boiling about EA?

GAMETAP

God damn peice of shit excuse for a waste of my time when I watch TV, since every other commercial is on how GameTap has "Over 200 of the hottest games", the newest of which is the orginal Splinter Cell. Most of them fall under the catigory of "games that time forgot".

The only thing more infuriating than GameTap commercials is the thought of GameTap itself--paying a fee per month just for the right to play crappy old arcade games you can download with emulators. And once you cancel your subscription, you lose everything. What a rip off.

Man I hate EA.
