First of all, Russia has no interest in nuking America. Japan maybe. Not America. There's nothing in it for them except MAD (which is what kept them from launching missiles in the Cold War) and if we were still able to retaliate afterwards, there would be no way they could fight off an invasion.

Secondly, it is never as simple as pushing a button. You've been conditioned by Hollywood to think that there's a blinking red button saying DO NOT PUSH in every command bunker that launches a missile. Read http://www.everything2.com/index.pl?node_id=87441
