Once you open the tool, it shows you a serial number already entered, but it's not my serial number at all.

I checked the readme to see if this is meant to be some sort of security thing to stop people looking at your serial from over your shoulder but it's not.

Once I enter my serial number and click save, if I load up the tool again, it has a completely different number once again.

Any thoughts?

The serial displayed the the encrypted version of the serial that goes into your registry.
