The fact remains that they are people and they do deserve knowing that you're leaving. Also, resigning explains a lot as to why they're leaving. Not just, "LOL, I GO." If someone wants to resign because they feel strongly about something, then why complain? You're just trying to make yourself look better by insulting him because he has enough respect for people to kindly step down rather than leaving people high and dry. See it the way you want, but it only makes you look like a fool.
