It looks good so far. I haven't noticed any slowdowns and memory usage still seems great to me. Opera Developers consistently provide great results with each update. I still have yet to try any of the new stuff though...

But I freaked out when it first installed! For some reason when I restarted the new version of Opera it lost my current session and started from one over a year old! I'm still looking for my current session, but I could remember most of the pages open anyway. It was still pretty frustrating however.

And didn't Opera always have extensions, but they were just called User Javascripts?
