Anyone wanna organise an emo attack? that would be funny, not like they are gonna do anything about it other than cry a lot and slit their wrists.

Just imagine, even if just one emo took his/her life as a result, you could know you have a made a real difference to the world! think about it

WASHINGTON -- Congress convened in a special emergency session today in an attempt to find answers to the mass suicide of three million American teenagers yesterday. All three million were found at home in their rooms with slit wrists after a successful hacking attempt by unknown vandals destroyed the servers of Rupert Murdoch-owned MySpace.com. Manhunts are in progress in 40 states and several arrests have been made; however, public pressure has now been put on Washington to establish more secure "emo laws," creating a safe haven for children ranging from ages eleven to seventeen to cut themselves and complain about who "broke their lives."

"I just can't believe this happened to me!" one young man said. "MySpace understood me when none of you knew who I was! Now I don't even feel like a person!" President Bush declined to comment, but was heard to have said, "...think he really needs to shut the fuck up."

I was bored.

Anyway, I prefer to make my presence felt by smashing ice cream into a little boy's face.
