Subject: Re: Error running Renguard
Posted by danpaul88 on Mon, 03 Jul 2006 15:40:46 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Dr. Lithius wrote on Sat, 01 July 2006 22:55I would've turned off Automatic Updates from the start, but XP has this nice little habit where it sits there and whines every five minutes about how "Your system may be at risk!" or something. 'course, if your system isn't "genuine," they could give a flying shit...which suits me just fine, really. I'd rather they not care at all than care too much.

Open start menu, click Run

Type in services.msc

Find Security Center and right click, select properties.

Set it to startup: Disabled and stop the service.

And that's the end of the annoying popups. Security Center service's only function is to provide annoying popups about out of date virus definitions, and your system may be at risk crap.

NOTE that this does not disable automatic updates, just the popups that go with them. I am not sure if the 'you need to restart your computer because it has been updated' crap is disabled or not by doing this, but I havn't seen it since I disabled it a while back...