I'd like to point out that Britain seems more of a target at the minute, considering we have just had 1st anniversary of the London bombings i think we are serious at with high muslim population racial tensions are always high,i remember going to Bradford to support my football team, and the people there just peered out the windows at us as if we were foriegn, it felt like a different country. We have the threat coming from from our home turf unlike the americans. I think we have unecessarily waded into to support the Americans on whatever they want and its cost us.
