There is an option in Tweak-UI that allows auto log-on.

This account cannot be deleted because if something happens to your other accounts, it is the account you will use to administrate Windows. (If I am wrong, tell me, but I don't think I am.)

lol I remember on my sister's computers a couple of years ago I deleted the main account (i guess the admin account). I made a new admin account and deleted the original in the attempt of freeing up disk space.

It didn't free up disk space and the comptuer's really fucked up ever since Why don't you reinstall the OS? Maybe just reinstalling SP2 would fix the group policy user account issues.
