

---

Subject: Re: This is how we treat child-killing criminals
Posted by cheesesoda on Mon, 21 Aug 2006 16:24:19 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

warranto wrote on Mon, 21 August 2006 10:33 Although they are taking it to a bit of an extreme, there is one thing that should be mentioned. He's been arrested on suspicion of things, no actual charges have been laid. They are on dangerous ground, as you can only hold someone for so long before you must charge him with something. It wouldn't surprise me if this treatment is a "sucking-up" measure to ensure his "cooperation" continues. That's incredibly stupid, though. "Hey, we'll suck your dick and coddle your balls if you promise to cooperate." He's not guaranteed to help out and be cooperative, so why would they do something like that? It's just another bullshit fallacy in our system.

---