Personally I just use Proxomitron for one and three; I'm not sure what you mean by two. Proximitron looks good, but it's not an Opera widget.

For the second one, I have a plugin for FF that helps me design websites, it allows me to hover over an element, say a paragraph and it will show me where it is in the site structure, i.e.
html > body > div#main > div.content > p

It also highlights the particular element, which is nifty for checking padding etc.
