Well hell, call them tomorrow and see if they'll generate another one for you. You may have the first fool proof keygen for Windows. I don't know what I was thinking. A fresh install wouldn't change a damn thing. Once you loose the activation you have to enter the key, and it Windows generates a hash to reflect your hardware. Then it has to phone home with this information no matter what. Windows has a points system it uses for your hardware configuration that's fairly interesting.
