Hey, I'm not saying that Khold doesn't need to receive his just dessert for his actions, but I'm just arguing that he hasn't done anything in a (fairly) lengthy amount of time.

I get along with Kholdstare just fine. I see no reason why I can't trust him or defend him. We all have our strikes against us. By the logic of not trusting people who have done something wrong... I shouldn't be trusted, Kholdstare shouldn't be trusted, nor xptek, Crimson, and just about everybody else in the world.

Maybe I should care more about being lied to, but at the same time, maybe you shouldn't outcast those who have done wrong. Shouldn't you try and embrace them more, and show them the light, rather than cast them into darkness? Give people a second chance, whether or not they deserve it. I'm not saying forget about what he's done, but just because he did it once doesn't guarantee that he'll do it again.

As for not defending you... I probably should have. Though, I didn't feel like having to research the threads and defend what you were saying.

As for being lied to.. it's the internet. If it affected me personally, I'd be a little more concerned. Someone online lying to me doesn't have the same effect as a friend lying to me.
