Crimson wrote on Thu, 05 October 2006 05:35 Over the past 3 and a half years I've been running this forum, I have been approached time and time again asking why I don't ban him and why I let him get away with being verbally abusive to so many people. I have apologized to those people for not considering their feelings on the matter enough, and this poll is to make amends to those people that I have ignored all these years. I don't care either way where the votes goes, but now at least those people can't say I didn't try. If this were a retaliory measure for ACK's betrayal against me, then Spooky would have a poll up with his name on it along with several others. Don't misread the intent of this poll. I clearly stated it at the first post.

All I was saying, was that if he hadn't gotten involved in this whole "business", this poll would never have happened. That's why it's ironic, that, at the moment of the end (if he's banned) that it wasn't the fact that he was flaming some mod maker in the end, but that it was him telling the truth (going so far as to go against someone he's known for 5 years or whatever) [There's a quote somewhere about how it takes much greater courage to stand up against your friends than your enemies. Or something.] that lead to his ban. I don't intend to mean you are retaliating against him. I also don't mean to say that he hasn't done some bad things. He has. He's done some good things, too, more for this community than I have done. I'm just a player and all I really care about is playing the game for fun. All I was pointing out was that he has done some good, and that you can flame him for "turning against you" when he just wanted to clear up the fact that it wasn't spooky who was lying, when you said he was lying, while at the same time it was you. Something, I would deem "good". I don't necessarily say that it was right to use private conversations to show that it wasn't spooky lying, but what choice would he have had, if you weren't going to? I try to be laissez-faire as I can. I mean, Ack has done things million of others has done before him, it's just because he's "known" that he gets more recognition of it. If you think he's the only asshole here, you would be wrong.
