To say that his betrayal of me ultimately led to this poll is true, and I stood by him all these years because even though he was a complete dickhead towards people who didn't deserve it, he did do a lot for the community. There are people who like him, people who hate him, people who are indifferent. That's why I said people should vote based on their own opinion of whether or not he should be allowed to continue to post here.

To say that this poll came about because he betrayed me is like saying that the US nuked Japan because the guy who led the project was born. Just because the end event probably wouldn't have happened without the first event doesn't mean that the first event was the direct causation of the second event. It also doesn't mean the second event was something that shouldn't have happened.
