
Subject: Re: A sniff of democracy (aka ACK vote)
Posted by cheesesoda on Fri, 06 Oct 2006 14:59:24 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

KIRBY-098We aren't all perfect, no.

But did you learn from that experience, and do you repeat the behavior again and again?

Because if that were to happen you are indeed still the same person you were when you perpetrated that crime.

Most of us learn from our experiences. We become better people relationally, and socially.

Has Mr. ACK? I see a perpetual downward spiral over the last five years. I cannot fathom how you might interpret he's the better person.

Yes, I learned from the experience. I also have yet to repeat the same mistake.

I still don't see how this is a downward spiral for him. All I can see is a guy using the Internet who has pissed off a lot of people and has done some stupid things. However, that's not relevant for him being banned.

What he's done on these forums may be disrespectful, annoying, and downright mean, but on a forum with no rules, how can you say this is a bannable offense?
