

---

Subject: Re: x64

Posted by StealthEye on Wed, 11 Oct 2006 18:11:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Maybe because it is going to happen,
maybe because it is difficult to plan a date.

Maybe because some people will get mad at you when you do not make it in your deadline.

Maybe because developers would feel the need to make that date, and will produce less good code.

I bet I can come up with a lot of other reasons. Just learn not to ask for release dates, noone likes to give them.

I have to agree that it should be hurried on a bit, that's not my point, but I do think people should not ask for release dates all the time. At most you can say "I hope it will be out soon" or something, that feels nicer than "when will it be done". Just my opinion..

---