I think it would be the most neat thing in the universe to see people being able to live on Mars. Some day Earth is going to run out of room for everyone, I mean, we can only build structures so high, and then we will have to start looking into other areas of living area. Under sea? Other planets? Underground? You brought up a good point of view there.

And yeah, I do agree that we will use up the old resources and develop new ones. Hopefully though, the new resources developed in the future can do us the same good as the resources we have now.

As to humans adapting to their environment, evolution theories are going to go berserk.
