Even if scripts.dll doesn't load it it could be added. The thing SK tried to say was that the code scripts.dll provides can be used to make cheats. Whether this is by using code, copying code or only getting the memory addresses or anything doesn't matter.

I agree that is possible for some things, I do not agree that it is better not to release any code just because cheaters could potentially use it. But I will not discuss this once again as the discussion leads to nothing.
