there are alot of people in this world who think age automatically grants you wisdom, and that just because they have more experience in this world, they have a right to look down their noses at us, and brand us idiots because of our age.

i dont claim to be perfectly mature, and i dont like be looked down uppon for showing a bit of immaturity.

at my age, it is getting closer to a time when we'd be having to enter the world of work, and fend for ourselves, and it downright depresses me to see that people look down uppon me for enjoying the last year or so of 'freedom' that i'll have.

our exams start in the spring, the exams which could make or break our future - stressing enough as it is without being look down at just because of age.
