I hope you don't mind me venting.

For months I've known my current job was ending at the end of January. I'm a temp hire who has been here for almost 2 years. My boss has been trying to get an extra person approved in the company all this time to hire me on. So all this time he has been able to keep extending my contract but just a few months ago corporate announced that temp workers can only work 9 months straight then have to be hired on or find a new job then return.

My boss says I do an excellent job and would love to hire me on but theirs a snag. We have a slacker in our department. Guy doesn't do his job. Hell half his job I've been given since he complains that he is to busy. I do my work plus his and still have enough time to chat on the forums lol. If he would sit in his seat more than half the day he probably could get some work done. Instead he visits several people all day chatting.

The department I work in is Telecommunications. I'm the operator for all incoming calls and I give the work out to where it should go. Everyone pulls their weight and will help another out if needed all but this guy. I get complaints constantly about him not following up or doing his job. That's why some of his responsibilities are now mine to keep from the department having complaints.

I told my boss today why don't you just fire his ass and give me his work. I can do mine plus his then you have your headcount and don't have to get another one approved. Well turns out they just did. They fired him today.

So why am I pissed off, you would think I'd be happy.

In order for my boss to hire me he has to be approved to hire on 2 employees. First one he has to hire before me is a minority. See now he is fired and he was black we no longer have a minority in our department. Since I'm white they can't hire me on. My boss said even if I get a new job once they hire a minority then he wants me back.

Now don't you dare label me as a bigot since I'm pissed off to no end. Whatever happened to be hired for your works and not your skin color or sex? My boss said my hands are tied I can't hire you till we hire a minority first. I love my country but this isn't right. What about fairness for those who work their ass off? What about being color deaf and sex deaf and just treating people as people? Diversity my ass. If this is considered fair they can take diversity and shove it up their ass.
