Then why do you factor this into your dislike of blacks?

f100d3d wrote on Thu, 21 December 2006 00:39But like I did say, all men are NOT created equally. Some are stronger, some are more more intelligent, some are less susceptible to illnesses, etc. So when talking about discrimination I feel its fair to say that the argument of "we're all created equal" is complete bullshit -- because many white folks deserve jobs or entrace to university that have been filled by "Affirmative Action" racism.

That's really determined by the individual rather than race. That's why your whole argument "against" blacks makes no sense. None of this has anything to do with race and has more to do with that fact that we're all human and all have faults.

f100d3d wrote on Thu, 21 December 2006 00:39As for the AIDS comment? I'm pretty sure that epidemic wasn't started by a white man or anyone of "european decent" if you catch my meaning. If you don't catch my meaning ... then I suggest you research history and U.S. statistics a little more.

Why does it matter what skin color the person who originally had AIDS had? Seriously. If the person who originally contracted AIDS was white would you believe that white people are somehow inferior?

Oh, fun fact, the third known case of HIV was in a Norwegian sailor[x].
