
Subject: Re: Forum rules/discussions/policies
Posted by cheesesoda on Fri, 12 Jan 2007 01:08:56 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

f100d3d wrote on Thu, 11 January 2007 19:51 Can someone please kindly clarify for me what the forum rules are in regards to having an opinion in the 'Hot Topics' forum? Apparently when you speak your mind that is grounds for topic locking and revocation of your posting priviledges.

Discuss.

You have the hardest time understanding simple concepts, don't you?

A mod can lock it for whatever reason he/she wants. No rules have to be "broken" to warrant a lock. There have been several flame topics that have been locked, and flaming isn't against the rules.

Also, you are breaking an understood code of conduct. You respect and obey the moderators/administrators. Egotistical continuance against the wishes of the administration team only makes you out to be a fool. Stop acting like troop. Nobody's agreeing with you, so you can't possibly expect to think you're in the right.
