

---

Subject: Re: Marijuana

Posted by z310 on Tue, 16 Jan 2007 00:18:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Brain cells aren't destroyed by drinking, according to some research. But when you drink (more than moderately?), brain cells are damaged - although the damages seem to be reversible with abstinence - to create poor function.

Also, smoking doesn't produce toxins to kill brain cells like alcohol. Memory does seem to go out the window when you chronically smoke, though. That also goes away with abstinence.

---