Correct me if I'm mistaken (I've never smoked anything and don't plan to), but whenever I hear about pot smoking, I always hear about the high. To me, "high" implies a dramatic change in one's perception very quickly. Yes, alcohol does the same thing and I believe that term originated as a synonym of "drunk." However, I know it's possible to drink small amounts of alcohol and NOT get high. I've done it myself and have been around/heard about others who have. I have yet to hear of or experience, however, someone smoking small amounts of pot and not getting high.

People often drink alcohol without the intention of getting drunk and often have no trouble doing so. Are there many people who smoke pot with the intention of not getting high and are successful in doing so? (an actual query)
