Besides Maverick man, We all know that a lot of people ask a question about their problem before looking for an appropriate topic. That's usually why there's five different topics on the same problem. As for them asking the same stuff when you say you've got a problem, I understand that. For the majority of people, the problem comes from one of the things you mentioned before. If it's not, let them know what's up and they'll try to help ya with it.
