Couldn't have stated it better myself, Joe.

No he does not. He still is living at home with mommy and daddy, living the high school fantasy.

When he buys his first house and pays that first property tax bill, we'll see if he changes his mind.

My family is a poor one, but happy. We utilize many of the programs that are designed to support the poor, but I DO NOT agree with giving to those with no desire to contribute, and who have never worked an honest day in thier lives, with my tax money.

The reason I am poor, is I am taxed to the point of poverty. I deserve a rebate check for paying taxes since I started working at age 16. The loser who lives in a commune and fathers 5 children he doesn't care for, does not. Nor does the mother who abandons her kids every night to go screw a different guy every night, and get beered up.
