

---

Subject: Vehicles and Noobs

Posted by Commander A9 on Sat, 14 Jun 2003 13:10:22 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

This has been bugging me for the longest time. Why is it that whenever a player kills another and steals his vehicle that he is immediately called a noob? It baffles me to know that the moron who stepped out to fix up his Rocket Truck and expose himself to enemy fire or is not careful enough to prevent his vehicle from being captured by the enemy has the balls to call the victor a noob!

Example: Canyon Map. I'm on Nod. 3 on 3 game. I make it into the GDI base as a Nod grunt, plant my timer on the MCT to the Weapons Factory, and am about to leave when I see a Rocket Truck looking right at me. So I fire on it and duck back into the factory when it looks at me. I pop out and see that this idiot engineer gets out and is fixing it up. So I fire on him, he jumps in, I duck back. I get out, he's doing it again! So I run up, steal the Rocket Truck, and run him over.

He calls me a noob, so I blow the Factory, the Tiberium Refinery, and damage the Barracks. Now wouldn't the noob be the idiot who let his vehicle get taken?

Another Example: Field Map. I'm Raveshaw. I spot Hotwire fixing a Mammoth Tank just by the waterfall, so I sniper her and steal the tank. Am I a noob now? Seems to me that the same situation applies.

Overall, why call the man who managed to steal your vehicle out of your own stupidity a noob, only to have that guy run you over and take out half your base?

---