I don't, although maybe you are taking my comments towards other people as insults-- which is funny when you think about it. You're not taking it personally, you're taking it for somebody else.

However, I did take what JohnDoe said personally since it actually was directed towards my person.

JohnDoe's post almost makes sense until you consider that I actually just showed everybody how very uncool HE looks, the fact I'm over twice the weight he claims, the fact I don't actually have Asperger's (he's thinking of Steppo, somebody else he likes to harass), thinking that "drag and drop" is trouble, that he ONLY posts for attention/inflammation and NEVER has anything to add to any discussion, and that he's calling people nerds while openly saying that his useless forum posts are just a distraction from his manly MSN and IRC addiction.

I personally think the picture I posted struck such a nerve that JohnDoe's begun to do what's known as "projection" towards me, attempting to label me with the very afflictions he's afraid everybody else will see within him without ever considering reality.

I mean, holy shit, didn't "four eyes" grow old in elementary school even before everybody realized that professional sports players, billion-dollar executives, leaders of nations, civil servants, and even emo kids (on the other end of the spectrum) all wear glasses. It's like saying somebody's white or black and acting like that means something special, he's really scraping the bottom of the barrel here and it's kinda sad.

This is a lovely distraction while I wait for my corned beef to simmer a bit more, because I'm also Irish, which means X, Y, and Z. I'm still not sure how the fact I spend 1/4 of the year with my real-life fiancée and 3/4 of the year at college or visiting my family fits into everything; I'll try to work it out while I eat.

Yep, busting out an essay will totally show how little you care!!! Thanks for making it obvious that you don't have any real friends to hook up with through instant messenger, tho...kinda explains your skin tone. My worst picture > your best, so I'm not sure why you'd want to go in that direction...end of the day you're a pale, malnourished geek with a cyber gf who's in serious denial about how personal and serious he's taking all of this.

Hey guess what, I am going to color code this to make it so you can *maybe* understand it. I know you have trouble with reading comprehension, and I'm here to help!

Welp, based on your opening line, looks like you totally missed where I said However, I did take what JohnDoe said personally since it actually was directed towards my person. based on your first statement, and then went on to miss where I said This is a lovely distraction while I wait for my corned beef to simmer a bit more,. It makes me wonder if you actually read posts; because you missed a critical line both at the start and at the end.

I'm also a little bit confused about where you mentioned instant messenger and how you somehow conclude that I have no friends on. It's 9:38am on a Saturday morning, and as a rule, people here don't wake up till about 11am if they can help it. Looks like I still have 16 in-city actually active though for just AIM, another 53 (though most asleep) in one of the IRC channels... 15 more extra in the channel that's generally used when people want to meet up at my apartment to go shopping/pranking/dining...

Oh, here we go. You mentioned my skin, just as I kinda predicted when I said It's like saying somebody's white or black and acting like that means something special, he's really scraping the bottom of the barrel here and it's kinda sad.

You really ARE scraping the bottom of the barrel here! It's a bit pathetic that you'd have to use a comment I practically handed to you, you're a pathetic troll. Anyways, you seem to connect your messaging obsession with the fact that I've got white skin. Now, I'd say that's more in line with where I said I'm also Irish, which means X, Y, and Z.. And maybe the fact that I spend 3/4 of the year at college or visiting my family in Worcester, and if you check this handy link I googled up you'll see that the city has partly cloudy days for 107 days per year and fully cloudy days for 168 days a year. Out of 365 days a year, the city's got only 90 clear days.

But hey, surely your explanation transcends both genetics and environment. Yours features instant messenger! That makes your explanation, although basically unstated, hip and modern.

Let's see... you mentioned pictures or something, saying your worst is better than my best. What do you say you put up your worst and I'll pick a random one and we'll let everybody decide here? Surely you're confident enough. Don't back down now, Mr. Troll!

Let's see, you mentioned that I'm pale again-- yes, I'm a white Irish boy who lives in the city with only 24% of the year comprised of clear, sunny days! Would it surprise you to learn that there are a lot of pale Russians in Russia too?

You say I'm malnourished, yet I was actually cooking up a 12 lb chunk of corned beef while writing that last one... I don't quite see how you can make the comments you do unless you honestly can't read.

You mention my "cyber gf" when I already said I spend 1/4 the year with my fiancée; by the way, have you even held hands with a girl or what? I've never heard you mention any kinds of relationships/crushes/fuckbuddies or anything, just seen you accuse others of not having a girlfriend now and then.

Also, I'm not in denial about taking it personally-- remember one of those opening lines where I mentioned I took it personally? That's not denial buddy. What crack are you smoking here?

Hm, am I taking it seriously? If I was, I wouldn't have pulled out the "Renforums: Serious Business."

This is pretty nice, really. It's free bumps for the update advertisement, and hopefully if it turns into enough "drama" people will link their friends, who end up getting to scroll past the pictures on their way to find said drama.
