Did you happen to notice that those were two separate sentences? They are two completely different thoughts.

My statement about me going to a private school is just to show that I DID get taught the difference. My statement about me not being just an average-intelligence kid was simply to say that I understand these concepts.

I don't know why I decided to explain this to you, but maybe you can learn to think before you reply. Also, you have no right to be pissy when you openly use this "I still have a few more years to mature" excuse. If you know you're being immature, that must mean you're mature enough to stop yourself from looking like a fool. Self-control and maturity aren't one in the same.
