I was stating the fact that you stated the fact that you went to a private school. You made it sound like you were hinting that you feel higher than everyone else because of this fact. You also, with your statement was calling me (and other people ) an ignorant fool because i go to a government funded school.

I called you an idiot because you are. I don't care how much of an "intellectual" you claim to be, you've proven otherwise more than once.

I used caps sparingly. I used them for one sentence to get my point across. How is that a sign of immaturity?

No, you accused me of trying to look down at you and others because you go to public school. That was an assumption, and I promptly proved you wrong. Quit your assbattering and move along. American politics isn't your concern.
