wow finally someone who also has this problem!

i recently reformatted my computer and i havent played renegade in a while, but now when i try to play it lags bad (enough to mess up the sound pretty bad) and it will sometimes give me a message that the connection to westwood has been lost and will now quit, it then brings up a message that the server has been shut down.

I do have to admit though that my computer is probably better off as a paper weight. but it still meets the requirements. i used to be able to play renegade with 24 players with the graphics set up about half way and then it would start to get a little choppy. Also back in the day, i would just about never get disconnected (cable), but now things are different.

I have a:

PIII at 600mhz

128mb of RAM

Windows 98SE

A crappy 16MB ATI RAGE 128 pro

Cable connection though Router

Norton internet security (ive tried disabling it before playing, it doesnt really help)

I dont think that my internet connection is the problem, and I know my computer is on the edge of the requirements for the game, but it used to play better than it does now and i dont know why.
