
Subject: Re: Why fl00d3d is banned for 30 days
Posted by cheesesoda on Tue, 12 Jun 2007 14:11:51 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Jonty wrote on Tue, 12 June 2007 10:05cheesesoda wrote on Tue, 12 June 2007 14:50

These forums are free to register and post on.
We're free of stupid censoring by a large corporation
We're not forced to be on 'good' behavior
Dissenting opinions (to a certain, understandable point) are allowed.

Cons:

Censoring of trivial things: A load of stars uses the same amount of bandwidth as .com, and it's no use arguing that it's a malicious site.
Adminstrators act on their own personal opinions of everyone, effectively disregarding other peoples' opinions.
The use of an "official" forum to advertise a product that is essentially different.
Viking
trooprm02

I'll write more later, I really should do some work now.

I agree that it shouldn't be censored because it's NOT malicious, either, but her point wasn't the amount of bandwidth it uses... she just didn't want bandwidth going towards the site.
They don't disregard others' opinions if they're brought up in a civil way, and fl00d3d's overkill on the dissent wasn't civil by any means.
I agree with that. If she has a category for one product, she should allow for more categories of the same for others.
Viking and troop are both annoying, but can both be effectively ignored without having to ban.
They're not doing anything against the forum besides dragging down the already low collective IQ of renforums.