Not in terms of manpower (as they already have their own support teams) but in terms of having a "seal of approval" from the game publisher? We know this has been done for services like Xwis (and clanwars.cc?).

Follow up: If so, by what means could that support be obtained?

Just to point out, I'm not asking if any current projects WILL gain that support, but moreso if EA would be willing to give it to a current program if certain conditions are met (hence the reason for the follow up question)

This was a stupid question to ask. Like oh, we haven't already thought of it and asked? Until anything is definite, he won't be saying anything publicly about it.

That was MY question.

I intentionally worded (or tried to word it) so that nothing currently in discussion had to be revealed. Which is why I was using words such as "Is it possible" and "How could it happen?".
