sigh

When you have a forum and you set it up, the readme tells you to delete files FOR A REASON. It has several security issues that can easily be exploited.

And hate to be the one to break it to you, the US governments doesent give give a damn what happens online. Now, unless you go cracking government computers, or start a massive ripping campaign and start selling it yourself, or you piss off somebody like Microsoft, the recording industry, or an oil company nothing will happen to you. Stuff like packeting and botnets are no concern to the government unless their computers are part of it.

But, Wilost0rm The Second is a lamer who is obviously taking credit for a n00b exploit and then lying his ass off about shit.
