LOL. I stated all of the facts. You are the one who blindly keeps defending your buddy despite the truth right in front of your face. Ah well, I guess that's what good friends are for, to defend you even when they know you are wrong. Your close relationship is admirable and nothing to be ashamed of.

If anything good comes of this thread hopefully it will be:

1. Don't believe anything someone tells you without considering the facts.
2. Everyone should run AdAware periodically. Even if you don't visit gay porn sites you can get spyware.
3. If you make a mistake, it's a lot easier to just admit it and move on, rather than make up excuses and get your friends to lie for you, just to save face.

This has been a public service announcement.
