
Subject: Re: Terrorists in the UK

Posted by futura83 on Wed, 04 Jul 2007 10:50:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

puddle_splasher wrote on Wed, 04 July 2007 10:26Ancient_and_forever wrote on Tue, 03 July 2007 18:54

You come to a discussion forum (to the debate section too) expecting a straight answer and then for people to leave?

You want that, there wouldn't be anything up for debate, and to get that, you'd need to present a straight question. (IE: What did you have for breakfast today?)

Shall I be the teacher for you whilst acting like a petulant child?

What would a terrorist have for breakfast today?

What would you do to a terrorist after having breakfast today?

What would you do to a terrorist after having breakfast today whilst sitting in the Airport waiting to go on holiday?

and so on.....

How hard is that? Only Ancient need answer what his actions would be. Thats all I asked for. Actions from yourselfs and not a group discussion like you would have in school. Picture the scene as the teacher asks you one of the 3 questions above:

Now Ancient, "I want you to answer one of those questions", says the teacher.

"Hmmm" says Ancient whilst thinking out loud. Then comes his reply "Please Sir, I need to throw open the question for discussion to the class".

"Why", asks teacher.

"Sir, I do not have any of my own thoughts therefore I need to discuss and reply once I find out what the others think. Meanwhile I will sit on the fence until the discussion is finished".

Ancient it is very easy. I ask only that you give an action of what you would like to see happen, to terrorists in your country. Do not discuss, just answer.

Imagine that, but at a debate where things are thrown open for discussion where you are supposed to debate things and throw ideas around.

Until you understand that key word, debate, you'll carry on posting in ignorance.

Good-day.
