And I think we would have a better time tracking criminals if everyone had an RFID chip in their arm.

I hope you're kidding...

Yes.

That's the unfortunate thing about a free society. People abuse privileges. But I think it beats not having that option at all.

It's what got the US the title "Land of Opportunity." Some poor guy getting his toenails pulled out by the Chinese government can squeeze out of their border and into the US, where guess what? He has as good a chance as anyone to defend himself if someone tries to get him in trouble or he makes a mistake.

And if we as tourists get screwed in another country or don't have the bribe money for the police, we have to sit in a jail where the ACLU doesn't look while our government can't and won't legally do anything to help us.

But it's naturally the system's fault when someone manipulates it to his advantage.
