Tell that to people who patent their creations... Just because someone doesn't pay for a patent doesn't mean you're not stealing their creation.

Ideas are of very high value in the world. With the same resources on person has, another can create something millions of people will use while the other person does not.
Websites like myspace or facebook for example, I'm sure professional website developers can easily create a duplicate of these sites, but they didn't come up with the idea and whatever they come up with will just be copy without new and unique ideas of their own.
