
Subject: Re: Man returns gun ammo to walmart at 1300 feet per second
Posted by cheesesoda on Tue, 11 Sep 2007 16:43:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Ryu wrote on Tue, 11 September 2007 12:09cheesesoda wrote on Tue, 11 September 2007 08:21

Isolated incidents are going to happen. Accidents happen.

Who the fuck kills a 11 year old by accident and doesn't admit to it?

It's obvious he was murdered.

cheesesoda wrote on Tue, 11 September 2007 08:21

Should we rid of automobiles? They kill more innocent people per year than guns do. Still support manufacture of automobiles?

Obviously, Now, If people weren't retarded to drink alcohol and drive at the same time, them figures would be reduced alot.

Also, Looking both ways and using traffic lights to cross the road helps alot, Unless you're an idiot and have a death wish.

cheesesoda wrote on Tue, 11 September 2007 08:21

Edit: I would support having to own a gun license in order to purchase a weapon, but the license should be the equivalent of a driver's license. You have to know how to operate the gun, and know the laws regarding operation, but no background checks or anything more in-depth.

Okay, So a nursery shouldn't be allowed to do background checks on someone they're about to employee? no?

The police shouldn't do background checks on people they're about to employee?

You don't know who you're selling the gun to, Back ground checks can tell you a little about what the person could do with the weapon.

You people suck. Let's take away all of my liberties because someone else might get hurt, and some people might do that purposely. Oh-fucking-well. It's life. Shit happens. Get the fuck over it and move on. Just because the government makes it law doesn't mean it changes anything, and it doesn't. Not by much, anyways.

Business employing people is different than a business selling a product or service to consumers.

If the business wants to ensure that their customers have a squeaky clean record, they should be able to do so. However, it's not the government's job to decide for the business.

Again, the more people that own guns, the less violence is going to happen. If you have a 1 in 2 chance that you're going to encounter someone with a gun, are you going to be entirely confident in attacking that person, especially with bystanders with the same chance of owning a gun? I don't think so. As Nukelt said, criminals are selfish. They only care about themselves, so they're not going to do anything to put themselves in harms way.

Sure, there's always going to be exceptions to the world, but wrapping the world up in bubble wrap isn't going to make the world any better. It's going to suffocate people, and it makes for a dull existence. If you want to live in a bubble wrap world, then do that to yourself, don't make my government do that to me when I can handle myself. I don't care if people can't handle themselves in the same manner I can. If they want to fuck with me, then I can deal with them.

LEAVE MY LIBERTIES ALONE.
