If your using a laptop, might i reccomend the ASUSTEK XG station, it replaces your laptops crappy graphics card and gives you super good PC like graphics, it plugs into the side of the laptop like any wireless card or expansion card would for notebooks, then the cable connects to a box which contains a PCI express slot, you can install any graphics card you want (comes with nvidia 7950gt if am correct)

I've seen this thing demoed on new laptops trying to play games at full graphics, they did a comparison where they had the same laptops, one without the XG station and one with, the one with showed good results.
