That isn't pushing the limits of the engine. The "mechs" are just like a tank, there's nothing different about them except they have a looping animation which looks really stupid.

The "hover" units don't even hover. They aren't "hover" units. They're just like a tank, except they have a fake animation that makes it appear to hover, but it just doesn't have a tank tread or anything below it to show that the wheels are there.

Hmm, I guess "pushing it" wasn't the best way to put it. > What I meant is that Reborn is trying to do some things that the engine isn't capable of. Or is it, ACK? I remember a thread or two back on the old original mod forum about the best way to do mechs and hover vehicles in Renegade, and Greg replied by suggesting exactly what appears to be what the Reborn team did.

Dante's idea sounds feasible. Maybe there's a way to create some script that can enable/disable an animation on a vehicle?
