It's a worthy prefix to any immigration-related statement, considering the knee-jerk racism accusation you usually hear in response.

Kytten9 wrote on Mon, 24 September 2007 13:31Segregation such as that, that the BNP proposes IS racism, it's a racially motivated governing system and too bad for them that all the "non-white or non-born here" British Citizens will NEVER vote for their blase attitude toward a totalitarian government.....
No, they'll vote Labour instead, and like I said, that's the way we will get a totalitarian government.
See above re: sharia

Nobody's going to forcibly evict people who came to Britain legally and actually work, paying taxes and respecting others' rights and culture in the meantime, which accounts for the vast minority of immigration into Britain, if you haven't noticed.

Kytten9 wrote on Mon, 24 September 2007 13:31Besides, segregation from the rest of the world make us appear completely pompous and it would also make a rod for our own backs. If we didn't let people of other nations live in our country, then I am sure they would return the favour and that may also include imports and exports.....Our country is too far advanced technologically to support itself with it's own raw materials as we have become Dependant on the imports and exports of others.
That seems a little unlikely. Europe, for one, is all too aware what a disaster our illegal immigration situation is in - France in particular makes good use of it. As for countries like the USA, they're in the same boat as us with illegal Mexican immigrants. A much, much smaller boat, of course, but the same shaped boat nonetheless.
