Subject: Re: What happen to this game?
Posted by Jerad2142 on Tue, 02 Oct 2007 17:23:01 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Titan1x77 wrote on Thu, 27 September 2007 21:19I joined a marathon server, fnfalls...

People don't know how to play this game anymore, they complain about attacking the enemy's base (points), complain about holding the field, while someone keeps buying tanks to "mass" build them.

It's a shame the day is gone where people worked together to destroy the other teams base, instead of bitching about people trying to hold the field and kill tanks while keeping engineers in the HON repairing.

I understand they get credits, and I'm going to kill every shiny stank that sticks its nose out, so I honestly don't see a point in sitting around while they build 30 med tanks for a rush 30 mins later...

To each their own, but that should work both ways instead of kicking someone who knows how to play, and is only helping his team.

well, after about 20 mins of boredom, I grab a Sydney and kill all the med tank shells...lol

Back to a better server I go, wish "The Pitts" was still around ps. they had about 30 meds for 10 players, go figure

Okay, let me get this straight, they were massing for a team attack. So you get tired and get Sydney and destroy the tanks that they were building so they could attack as a team, therefore destroying the team work. Which makes you the person that wasn't helping the team. I mean you could have just quit instead of wasting 18,000 of your teams credits and who knows how much of their time. And beings friendly fire was proabably off they had no way to stop you.

Basically I am getting at, you should not be complaining about there being no team work, as you destroyed what team work there was.