Oh, no, not porn! Say it ain't so! Oh, the humanity!

I swear, people in this country get more shaken up about somebody seeing nudity than they do about people getting fucking murdered. Folks need to get their priorities in order- I might be able to understand this sort of appalled reaction if- and only if- nudity were a universal taboo, but it isn't.

That, and... HIGH SCHOOL. Not middle school, not elementary school, not kindergarten, not preschool. High school. Does anyone here actually subscribe to the belief that the vast majority of kids attending public high schools haven't seen boobs before? I'd be far more concerned about the kids doing heroin under the stairs, or flaunting gang colors, or hazing other students. Hell, I'd be more worried about them smoking a cigarette out on the lawn; at least that has some damaging effect. C'mon, people- they're just boobs. This is the twenty-first fucking century; you'd think people would have realized by now that seeing a pair of hooters doesn't scar kids for life.

Talk about making mountains out of mole-hills...
