Live in specificity all you want, but the model has always been:

Father is head of household

Children OBEY parents

Betrothal and courting before marriage with the father giving a blessing. (Dating NEVER existed before the fifties)

Children WORK in the household

Wife works with the children to develop social balance and respect for others while the father works to provide.

The family eats together every day and discusses the day's events

These of course are examples and I could go on, but my point is this:

We have traded the hard work put into developing our social fabric to focus on what we think we deserve and our comfort. We work three jobs to have a lexus and a license plate with our narcissistic banners of self indulgence.

We allow our kids to do whatever they want as long as they don't interfere with "Lost" and our internet time, because we're FAR more important and we need our "time" because we "worked" so hard.

Where is the self sacrifice (the true definition of love) and self denial for a greater good?

We have lost our moral compasses and are adrift on the way to a social shipwreck.
