
Subject: Re: Free Needles in Ukraine to Drug Users
Posted by Dover on Mon, 10 Dec 2007 00:45:22 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

cheesesoda wrote on Sun, 09 December 2007 10:36
Dover wrote on Sun, 09 December 2007 13:11
IF what I'm hearing is correct, all these "government thievery" remarks sound like a call to abolish taxes altogether.

In that case, have fun without anybody to answer the phone when you dial 911, or anyone to fix potholes in the freeways (Or build new ones), or to defend you when Canada gets too uppity and invades.

Really now, is your money THAT important to you? Can you really lay in your solid gold bed and roll around in your hundred dollar bills while your fellow man suffers? And don't get me started on the government! How DARE they assume that they can take part of YOUR money based on how much you make? It's like they think they're providing you protection and integral services or something.

Oh, wait...

I'm a Minarchist. I am not just sitting here saying "TAXES AND GOVERNMENT ARE BAD". I have a reason behind saying, "leave my money alone." I believe that we do need SOME, necessary, taxes. I have no problem with maintaining the police force, military, and the justice system. I don't have a problem with paying taxes on gas, if that money is strictly used for highway and road construction. Much else besides that is a waste of money, in my opinion.

Well, I'm a Decent Human Being, and I believe that hoarding wealth for the sake of hoarding wealth instead of using it to do some good in the world is more disgusting than 2girls1cup. Money isn't that important. It's a fleeting, fickle friend. But if I can turn my money into something positive, like a box of chocolates for my girlfriend or helping a druggie get clean, then who the fuck am I to say no? Any use beyond that is a waste of money, in my opinion.

On that note, who the fuck are you to say no?
