Goodness knows, but after a small arguement in computing class today, I'm going to suggest something -

Discrimination against left-handed people is far more common-place, ingrained and virtually impossible to remove than any other form of discrimination.

Comments? (Yes, I'm left handed, but I play the guitar right handed, use my mouse with the right hand and bat in cricket right handedly, although I can do that with my left hand as well, can't write with my right hand though)
