I learnt to swear from my parents. No doubt. I mean i heard a few bad words from school and heard the first affermentation to sex there, when another kid asked "Are you a virgin?" i got the piss taken out of me then as i had no comprehension of what it meant then...

I heard a lot of words like "Fuck, Bastard, Asshole, Dick-Head" and other strong words when i was about 4.

My Mum is very protective and my Dad is very strict on the swearing account of things. But they had there roughs as Married Couples do and i guess as it's so common to throw in extra words like "Shit and Fuck" to emphasise your'e point they did it unwittingly infront of me.

Naturally thinking it was more grown up and smart or clever in my young age i started to swear frequently. Until my Dad & Mum realised and started to swat my ass to the point of me crying and stuttering in my words.

I got out of the habit of swearing quite thoroughly by the time i was 8. Now even in my teen days at a good old age of 14 i don't swear much if not at all. Unless it's a very important of elevated matter. I also swear frequently when i'm around my mates, but it's really more less strong words like "Crap" and "Asshole".

I just think that many parents swear and teach there kids there bad words unwittingly. There are however a selective few parents who don't care or just see the whole matter as when and where they learn them. If not at school or at home kids will learn these words naturally in the real world.

I once was waiting at some traffic lights with a mate when two kids cam by on a BMX (Couldn't have been more than 6) and shouted "Hey you fucking twats what are you looking at!?"

I had done nothing to them, i didn't even know who they where. They didn't know me or my mate either. They just went past on a BMX on the other side of the road and shouted that at me.

The same happened in a shop in town. The store wasn't that full but a kid at least 4 years old in HMV in town said to me as i went past called me a bastard. I looked at him in a way, as if yo say "That's a bad word! Why did you call me that?" sort of thing. Then his Mum went past and told him to hold his hand in the store.

I find these sorts of things so annoying. As you can't ever really reply to them. You can't exactly tell them off or swear back...

I consider often informing the parents that there Son/Daughter called me something "Naughty" but i think it's not my place to.
